

I am an XM Radio listener. I use the Traffic and Weather channel for my home city of Houston, TX to plan my daily route. I find that their weather and traffic reports are far more thorough than anything the local radio offers, and they are reported more frequently. I believe that limiting XM's ability to provide me that content is unamerican and certainly a display of what is wrong with our nation today. Protect innovation, do not stifle it. Force the other broadcasters to play catchup here and provide equally thorough content to compete, rather than forcing the innovators to fall off the radar allowing them to rest on their current less than adequate service.
